Working Groups Spotlight

CLINICAL WORKING GROUP
The Clinical Working Group (CWG) shares best practices among member institutions regarding clinical and administrative structures, clinical practice, credentialing, privileging, marketing, business development, operations, and creative business models. We currently lead the Consortium's monthly Grand Rounds calls and have had active subgroups in Mental Health and Business. CWG members include those who have clinical, administrative, leadership, teaching and research roles, and may contribute across the other working groups: Policy, Education and Research. We look forward to continuing our collaborations with the other working groups on goals such as finding ways to electronically house information such as protocols for patient care, clinical models, handouts, etc. and surveying Consortium members to systematically collect relevant information to share with the rest of the membership. We have recently started a quarterly webinar panel discussion on clinical topics of most interest to the group.

EDUCATION WORKING GROUP
The Education Working Group (EWG) serves as a resource for learners and teachers of integrative medicine and health. This year we plan to provide active support to the student and resident interest groups and create a solid network of education champions (ideally one per school) who will facilitate communication with, and mentorship of, learners across the country. We will collaborate with these education champions to identify, mentor and educate our learners about integrative clinical topics, professional development and self-care. Via a listserv our teachers and learners network, disseminate helpful information and support each other. In lieu of monthly calls we contribute speakers to Consortium Grand Rounds and communicate monthly with our EWG members helpful resources for teachers of integrative medicine and health.

POLICY WORKING GROUP
The Policy Working Group (PWG) is for those interested in learning about and influencing local and national health policy with respect to integrative healthcare. The PWG is focused on increasing access to care and spreading awareness of the merits of Integrative Medicine and Health to local and national policymakers and healthcare administrators.

The PWG is interested in making a significant impact on healthcare through policy. Our consultant, Janet Kahn, is guiding the PWG through her ties with the newly appointed Surgeon General, staff at the Center for Medicare and Medicaid Innovation, integrative healthcare representatives on the AMA Committees that influence CPT coding and other reimbursement-related decisions, as well as non-profits active in this field.

RESEARCH WORKING GROUP
The Research Working Group (RWG) is for those interested in the evaluation of integrative medicine and health. The RWG includes individuals who have research roles in their institutions or who are interested in keeping up on research-related topics including:

- Hot-off-the-press study results
- Innovative study designs
- Cutting-edge technologies and untapped areas of integrative health and medicine research such as Practice-Based Research.

The monthly RWG conference calls are routinely scheduled for the 2nd Monday of every month at 2:00pm Eastern.

We are interested in updating the RWG database to ensure accuracy as well as your research expertise. Should we find a critical mass of RWG members with a specific interest (e.g., Pediatrics), a subgroup could be formed and spark a collaborative opportunity.

Storytelling Workshop

STANDING OVATION PRESENTATIONS
There is no faster way to influence large numbers of stakeholders than through effective presentations. But what are the key ingredients of a great presentation? What makes listeners feel engaged, empowered, and ready to take action? How can you come across as comfortable, authentic, and passionate in front of audiences of varying sizes and demographics? This hands-on, highly participatory workshop will explore the distinctions between good and truly great presenting. Drawing on techniques derived from the art of training actors in theater, the session will provide you with a framework for speaking from your mind and heart directly to the minds and hearts of others. Topics include making a great impression quickly by winning the first 60 seconds, using improvisation to speak more authentically, and shaping your message for a variety of audiences.

Todd Salovey, Associate Artistic Director, San Diego Repertory Theatre, and Faculty Member, Rady School of Management and Department of Theatre and Dance, University of California, San Diego

Todd leads the Rady School’s courses in presentations and communications. A curriculum he has developed, Standing Ovation Presentations, uses techniques drawn from acting and theater to achieve dramatic results for business and professional leaders. His communications clients include CEOs and leaders in education, healthcare, high-tech industries, and law. Todd is also a professional theater director, producer, and playwright. For almost 25 years, he has been the associate artistic director of the San Diego Repertory Theatre and on the acting faculty of the UCSD Department of Theatre and Dance. His productions have won numerous awards, and been seen at major theatres across the country. His professional directing credits include Hamlet, King Lear, Doubt, A Weekend with Pablo Picasso, and The Blessing of a Broken Heart, which he also adapted.

Interprofessional Integrative Health Panel Participants

A patient-case dialogue amongst our panel members, highlighting the diversity of our Consortium members, both related to patient care and beyond.

David Eisenberg, MD, is this year’s recipient of the Bravewell Distinguished Service Award. From 2000-2010, David served as the Bernard Osher Distinguished Associate Professor of Medicine at Harvard Medical School, founding director of the Osher Research Center and the founding chief of the Division for Research and Education in Complementary and Integrative Medical Therapies at Harvard Medical School.

Jeff Feldman, PhD, has served as the Director of Wake Forest’s Center for Integrative Medicine since October 2012 and is a past Chair of the Consortium’s Clinical Working Group. In 1999 he joined the faculty of Wake Forest University School of Medicine where he currently is an Associate Professor in the Section of Neuropsychology of the Department of Neurology. Jeff serves as Program Director of Occupational Rehabilitation Programs, supervises and provides psychology services for inpatient rehabilitation, and sees a wide range of chronic pain, traumatic injury, neurology and general medical patients.
Ben Kligler, MD, MPH, is an integrative family physician and Associate Professor of Family and Community Medicine at Icahn Mount Sinai School of Medicine. He recently stepped down from his position as Vice Chair of the Department of Integrative Medicine at Mount Sinai Beth Israel to become the National Director of the Integrative Health Coordinating Center at the VA.

Mary Koithan, PhD, CNS-BC, FAAN, is currently the Anne Furrow Professor of Integrative Nursing at the University of Arizona, College of Nursing and Associate Dean for Professional and Community Engagement. She has practiced as a Clinical Nurse Specialist caring for chronically ill adults for more than 35 years, focusing on promoting wellbeing for diverse cancer survivor communities in the southwest. A reiki master and therapeutic touch practitioner, she has been using an integrative approach to nursing since the early 1970s.

Patricia Piant, MSTOM, Lac, Dipl OM, is a Diplomate of Oriental Medicine, holds a Master of Science degree from Pacific College of Oriental Medicine, and a Bachelors degree from the University of Wisconsin, Madison. She is a member of Society for Integrative Oncology and currently practices at NorthShore University HealthSystems as part of the Integrative Medicine team.

Victor S. Sierpina, MD, is the WD and Laura Nell Nicholson Professor of Integrative Medicine and Professor, Family Medicine. He is a University of Texas Distinguished Teaching Professor. His lifelong career interests in medicine have included acupuncture, tai chi, nutrition, mind-body therapies, functional medicine, spirituality, and botanical medicine.

Raymond Teets, MD, practices Integrative Family Medicine, and is director of the Integrative Medicine Family Medicine Fellowship and Integrative residency education at Mount Sinai Beth Israel, in New York City. He also co-directs an Inter-Professional Integrative Medicine Program, and is very interested in the challenges and opportunities in Inter-professional collaboration.
Members of the final Executive Committee for The Bravewell Collaborative — Christy Mack, Penny George, Ann Lovell and Sherry Lund — will talk about the critical principles that guided Bravewell’s vision, mission and decision-making and ultimately created a new and effective model for meaningful philanthropy. Moderated by Bonnie Horrigan, the former Executive Director for Bravewell, the group will discuss how they chose their initiatives and leveraged their combined resources to create system change and advance integrative medicine.

This Fireside Chat will give the audience a glimpse into the full story as told in The Bravewell Story: How a Small Community of Philanthropists Made a Big Difference in Healthcare, a new book written by Bonnie Horrigan that traces the work of this unusual alliance through its 14-year history as a case study in effective, meaningful and strategic giving. A question and answer session will follow the formal presentation.

The Bravewell Collaborative supported the infrastructure for the Academic Consortium for Integrative Medicine & Health for the first ten years of its existence, ultimately enabling the Consortium to grow into the vibrant and relevant organization it is today.

The Bravewell Story will be available for purchase at the Consortium exhibit table during the Congress. It is also available for purchase at Amazon.com in both the paperback and Kindle versions.

The Consortium’s Bravewell Distinguished Service Award honors one of our members for their tireless contributions to the Consortium’s mission.

David M. Eisenberg is currently the Director of Culinary Nutrition and Adjunct Associate Professor at the Harvard T. H. Chan School of Public Health. His landmark national surveys (New England Journal of Medicine, 1993 and JAMA, 1998) documented the remarkable extent to which the US population routinely uses and pays for complementary, alternative, integrative and lifestyle related medical therapies. These data were referenced by the US Congress in its creation of the NIH Office of Alternative Medicine and, subsequently, the National Center for Complementary and Alternative Medicine, recently renamed the National Center for Complementary and Integrative Health.

From 2000-2010 Dr. Eisenberg served as the founding Director of the Osher Research Center at Harvard Medical School and the founding Chief of the Harvard Division for Research and Education in Complementary and Integrative Medical Therapies. He simultaneously served as the Director of the Program in Integrative Medicine at the Brigham & Women’s Hospital. In addition, Dr. Eisenberg was a founding member of the Academic Consortium for Integrative Medicine & Health and served as Chairman of the Scientific Review Committee for all of the Consortium’s prior research conferences. From 2012 until 2015 he served as the Executive Vice President for Health Research and Education at the Samueli Institute, in Alexandria, Virginia.

His current educational and research interests include: (1) studies to assess the safety, clinical and cost effectiveness of complementary and integrative medical therapies; (2) the systematic evaluation of herbal medicines using state of the science technologies; and (3) novel multi-disciplinary strategies to optimize lifestyle and self-care behaviors (e.g. diet, cooking, mindfulness, exercise, web based technologies and behavioral optimization) to prevent, treat and manage common medical conditions.

Related to this third area of focus, he is the founding director of the “Healthy Kitchens, Healthy Lives” continuing education conference, which has been offered twelve times and attended by more than 4000 health care professionals since 2006. Dr. Eisenberg is also currently the Co-Director of the newly launched Harvard T. H. Chan-Culinary Institute of America “Teaching Kitchen Collaborative”, a group consisting of 26 member organizations with novel teaching kitchens and related curricula, all of whom seek to develop “best practices” and participate in a research network whereby these emerging educational models can be evaluated for use by patients, corporate employees, students, retirees and various community based populations.

Dr. Eisenberg is a graduate of Harvard College and Harvard Medical School. He completed his fellowship training in general internal medicine and primary care and is Board Certified in Internal Medicine.

In 1979, under the auspices of the National Academy of Sciences, Dr. Eisenberg served as the first US medical exchange student to the People’s Republic of China. In 1993, he was the medical advisor to the Emmy Award winning PBS Series, “Healing and the Mind with Bill Moyers”.

Dr. Eisenberg has served as an advisor to the National Institutes of Health, the Food and Drug Administration and the Federation of State Medical Boards with regard to complementary, alternative and integrative medicine research, education and policy. From 2003-2005 Dr. Eisenberg served on a National Academy of Sciences Committee responsible for the Institute of Medicine Report entitled, “The Use of Complementary and Alternative Medicine by the American Public.” He is currently a member of the US National Board of Medical Examiners Clinical Skills Committee. Dr. Eisenberg has authored more than 100 scientific articles involving complementary and integrative approaches to health care and continues to pursue research, educational and clinical programs relating to integrative and lifestyle medicine.

As a the son and grandson of professional bakers, Dr. Eisenberg aspires to bring together the culinary, medical, public health and business communities to enhance comprehensive health care for all.
